Global Climate Accelerator for Young People

become a project earth student ambassador

Inspire locally. Connect globally. Help young ideas grow.

Project Earth Student Ambassadors are young people who represent Project Earth in their school, community, region or country.

They help other young people see that their ideas matter and that they can contribute to tackling the climate and biodiversity challenges facing our planet.

Inspire - Be a local inspiration

Share the message that young people can make a difference.

Celebrate environmental ideas and innovation.

Be a visible, positive voice for Project Earth.

Encourage - Bring others in

Help schools and communities discover Project Earth.

Show that everyone can contribute—wherever they live.

Encourage young people to develop and submit their ideas.

Support - Help Pitch for the Planet

Support local Pitch for the Planet events.

Welcome and encourage student pitchers.

Give constructive feedback & represent young people's voices.

What does being an Ambassador mean?

You do not need to be a climate expert. We are looking for enthusiastic young people who want to inspire others, listen to new ideas and help build a global community of young environmental innovators.

Ambassadors can help in ways that suit their school and community, from sharing opportunities and encouraging submissions to taking an active role at a local Pitch for the Planet.

What we need from you

A clear photo of you

A short biography about you, your interests and why you want to be an Ambassador

Your location for our global Student Ambassador map (town/city and country)

How you will be represented

Featured as part of Project Earth's global Student Ambassador community.

Shown with your photo and short biography.

Added to our global map so young people can see the growing network around the world.

Invited to help represent young people at relevant Pitch for the Planet events.

A global network of young people

Our aim is to build a worldwide network of Student Ambassadors—young people inspiring young people. Together, Ambassadors can help uncover brilliant ideas, encourage more young people to take action and make every Pitch for the Planet a celebration of what the next generation can achieve.

YOUR VOICE.
YOUR COMMUNITY.
YOUR PLANET.

Help us find, encourage and support the young people whose ideas could change the world.
